

LxthalFC Scriptwriter Handbook v3

Updated 10 Sept 2026. One document that replaces everything before it: Rules v2, the original Scriptwriter Rules PDF, the Clip Sourcing SOP, the Pre-Submission Checklist, the Essential Football Terms list, and every written instruction from the WhatsApp chat (25 Jul – 10 Sep). Lines tagged NEW were added from the chat since v2. Every rule here has been broken at least once. Keep this open next to you for every video.

1. Before you touch a new video

- NEW Order of work, every session: (1) read every new doc comment in every week, starting from Week 1, and reply to each one; (2) do the revisions; (3) only then start new videos.
- NEW Keep this handbook next to you for every video. If a recent note seems to contradict it, tell Joel rather than choosing yourself.
- NEW Work through videos in chronological order. There is no Trello; the doc is the system.
- NEW Minimum 5 new scripts per day, even while revising old ones. Build a routine; finishing 20 of 35 in a week is not acceptable. But don't rush volume either: stacked speed means stacked mistakes.
- NEW Know the channel. Turn on post notifications for youtube.com/@thelxthalfc and watch every video that goes out. Study 5–7 videos closely to learn how Joel talks about moments and which details in a description let him say certain lines.
- NEW Communication first. Ask questions before the work instead of saying “got it” and delivering surprises. Joel would rather talk it through than discover errors after.

2. First decision: which type of video is it?

Get this wrong and the whole video is a redo. Decide before you search for a single clip.

Type A — Clip / moment videos

Top 5 goals, moments, celebrations, skills, fails, disrespect, sportsmanship, etc. Anything where the clip itself is the content.

- Ordered by the Viral Formula (Section 3). Never chronological.
- Sourced from viral reference videos (Section 4).
- You are the engine behind every pick. AI is not.

Type B — Facts / stats / list videos

Fastest goals, best save from every World Cup, Ballon d'Or if Messi and Ronaldo never existed, records, best player born each month, combined XIs, kings of each league.

- NEW Quick test: if the title has a number or unit behind it (seconds for fastest goals, goals for most goals, years/editions), it is fact-based.
- Ordered chronologically or numerically, never by the viral formula. Counting starts at 5: lowest number → highest, or as the notes say (e.g. “Best save from every World Cup” runs 2026 – 2022 – 2018 – 2014). Always include the most recent edition — there is no excuse for a World Cup video with no 2026.
- NEW Lists must follow reality. World Cups are every 4 years, so parts run through real editions (e.g. 2026–2010), never overlapping ranges like 2022–2018 then 2018–2026.
- These are “Claude jobs”: use Claude to build the list, then verify every entry yourself. You still write the explanation in your own words.
- NEW If the notes say “use Claude”, it is an instruction, not an option.
- The viral formula is not needed here, but the video still needs a strong start — say in the notes if you think an order change would help and let Joel decide.

Name / story lists (no number in the title)

NEW Players who retired too early, greatest player in every country's history, scariest defenders. Off-pitch, player-focused content.

- NEW Search the exact title on YouTube first and check Shorts. Rotate keywords when results dry up (“players who retired too early”, etc.).
- NEW Shortlist only players who appear in viral videos on the topic, and verify each one fits the title (elite AND retired — if you can't confirm they were elite, cut them).

- NEW Once viral references are exhausted, use Claude: paste the title, ask for 15 (or 30) ranked candidates with facts, then hand-pick your 5 on what grabs attention (big name, controversy, story). You can paste the criteria in and ask it to pick. A video on each player isn't required — judge on status and story. That's how we make videos nobody has seen before.
- NEW Verify Claude's output — it bugs out (it suggested Nesta, Sócrates, obscure names). Prefer recent, renowned players; viewers won't know Nakata-tier names. Older players only if the edit style suits them.
- NEW Order: #5 = the player from the most viral reference video (Lahm). #4 = the most engaging story (Zidane, headbutt). #3 = more renowned/recent. #2 = less recent. #1 = the most prestigious name (Cantona) — name weight applies.
- NEW Format: names with a brief description. Specify who vs who where relevant and show the selected one.
- NEW Country lists: use big footballing nations, one player each (Brazil – Ronaldinho, Argentina – Messi), never the same country twice across parts, and split so both parts are quality. Skip players too old for good footage (Pelé).
- NEW Always put the viral reference links in the reference field — Joel couldn't find the Lahm video otherwise.

3. The Viral Formula (Type A, non-negotiable)

- #5 — Proven hook. The start clip of the most viral reference video. Never the least viral option. Attention is won or lost here; you never win it back later.
- #4 — Most engaging clip. Backed by comment data (quote the top comment and its likes).
- #3 — Engaging, less than #4, more than #2.
- #2 — Least engaging of the five. Still a banger — just the weakest banger.
- #1 — The infamous #1. Visually the best / represents the video style. Player-name weight matters here (~5%).
- NEW #1 is not “the best clip”. It's a notable #1 that is still good enough to feel like a #1. You hook viewers in inverse order: 4 down to 2 gets progressively less engaging. Check whether the reference used it at #1.
- Proven hooks outweigh comments. Order of evidence: (1) clip used as a hook in a viral reference, (2) a viral video on that clip, (3) comments. Comments only count for what they actually say — “Molina's shot was good” is not engagement; a controversial or reaction-heavy comment is. Most comment-based evidence belongs at #4, not #5.
- NEW “Most mentioned in comments” is not the same as “most used as a hook”. The hook always wins #5.
- NEW If every viral reference opens with the same clip, it is proven — never swap it (Bamford opened every chest-and-volley reference; Neymar opened both references).
- NEW #5 is a proven hook most of the time. The only exception is when you're deliberately improving on it — and then you say why in the explanation.
- NEW No proven hook exists? Use the moment with the most viral reposts / videos about it (e.g. Mbappé being ignored) and state that in the explanation.
- NEW Never reorder because commenters say “this should be first”. If we copy what worked, we get the same comments and the same engagement on our video. Replicate what people engage with — don't remove it.
- Decide slots while shortlisting (“this is clearly a #4”). Don't order at the end.
- Space out bait / wrong picks — never two next to each other. Two-thirds of the video must be obviously right so the bait reads as debate, not clickbait.
- Never Messi and Ronaldo in the same video at the start — nobody debates that.
- When the notes give a joke pick (e.g. “Antony at 1”), it is there for a reason. Do it.
- Do not invent your own formula. “Generally good at #1” logic is banned. Making your own version of the criteria has caused two rounds of errors already.

4. Sourcing references

- Viral references only. Under 100k views = bad. 100k–500k = acceptable. 500k+ = best. Weight by views. A non-viral reference proves its clips are NOT engaging enough.

- NEW Views are the metric for videos — that's what you and Joel get paid on. Likes don't matter on videos; they only matter on comments, where they show how many people agree.
- NEW Reference videos must be about the title — nothing else. Random clips of the players are not evidence of anything (the Neuer 23k case: that is nowhere near his most popular video).
- A viral video on the topic outweighs comments under a different video (the Ward-Prowse case).
- NEW Always search the exact video title on YouTube first — for every video type. Rotate keywords when results dry up; this is a skill that grows with volume.
- NEW Look through all the results before picking. The reference isn't always the first video (Sunday League legends: the reference was the second video, with Vidal on the ball).
- Search “top 5 / top 10 [thing]” first — you will find creators like FootyRanks and MarkFC with pre-sourced clips. If a ready-made reference has 5 clips, take them and reorder.
- Shorts before long-form. Long-form only when there is no Short, and then: link + timestamp next to every clip, use comments and the most-replayed bar.
- Safest play: take the best 5 from the one viral reference and reorder per the formula. Only add outside clips if they clearly ADD value.
- Copying the reference order exactly is “almost a crime” — reorder unless the reference order is already perfect.
- Every clip must be a banger. If you cannot find a banger, ask Joel — do not fill the slot. A simple cross is not a “smartest moment”. A good goal is not a “disrespectful goal”.
- Recency: for “right now” / “best in the world” titles use the current season, not last season. For young viewers, trends means the last 1-2 years.
- Think like the editor: grainy, watermarked, or pop-up-covered clips that Aldrich can't clean don't go in, even if the clip is good.
- Reference section = viral references only. Clips for the editor go next to the clip entry, not in the reference section.
- Steal comedic phrases from reference comments and work them in. Great artists steal.
- NEW If Joel says an idea isn't proven and to scrap it, delete it and move on.

5. Clip Sourcing SOP (highlight links)

Workflow: build the video as usual (find clips, add references, explain every pick) → submit for review → once approved, source the highlight link for every selected clip and paste it into that version.

Step 1 — Moment-focus or player-focus?

- Moment-focus — the script describes a specific thing on the pitch (goal, skill, incident). Find and paste the exact highlight link for each moment.
- Player-focus — the video is about a player generally (e.g. “Top 5 Richest Footballers”). Just add the player's name; the editor finds clips to match the audio. No links needed.
- NEW Even for player-focus videos, still search the moments on YouTube; you can briefly describe moments that have gone viral.

Step 2 — Finding the clip

- Search format: [Player] vs [Team] + the moment — “Roberto Carlos vs France free kick”, “Zlatan vs England bicycle kick”, “Messi vs Getafe solo goal”. Adding the year helps. Check the kits in the reference to confirm the match/era.
- Turn on a UK VPN first (any free one). UK-restricted channels like Sky Sports / Sky Sports Retro upload the best-quality, upscaled versions of iconic moments — usually the clip to use.

Step 3 — Picking the best version

- Open every decent candidate in its own tab and eliminate: 1080p minimum, least grainy; no watermarks, logos over footage, effects or filters; official uploads (broadcaster/club channels) over re-uploads; view count = credibility; full official highlight reels beat random re-uploads.
- Don't overthink it — if a clip is clearly acceptable, use it. But take an extra minute if you suspect a cleaner version exists.

Step 4 — Struggling? / Step 5 — Last resort

- Try in order: reverse image search a screenshot of the moment → Google the moment (Reddit, X, Instagram) → ask in the chat.
- Only after exhausting all of that, write “use clip from reference” in that clip's section. This mostly happens with FootyRanks-style niche footage.

6. Read the title. Then read it again.

More redos come from misreading the title than from anything else. Define the key word before you start:

- Tournament = World Cup, Champions League, Club World Cup, Euros, Copa América — not a league.
- Leagues = one per country, consistent category. Don't mix Europe, a country, and a cup in one list.
- Legends = past professional footballers. Not randoms, not current players.
- Primes = player + era (“Messi 2010–12”) with a clip from that era. Not their best on-pitch moments.
- Disrespectful goals = shooting from absurd range, skilling defenders up, humiliation. Not just good goals.
- Worst World Cup winners = the weakest teams that won. Not each winner's worst World Cup.
- Best goalkeepers ≠ World Cup goalkeepers. Teams ≠ players. Free kicks ≠ penalties. Viral trend celebrations ≠ any celebration.
- NEW Words that sound related are not the same: “World” ≠ “World Cup”.
- NEW Retired = retired from football. Retired from international football is not retired (Neuer).
- NEW Fails = moments that genuinely make the player look bad. An ordinary miss doesn't qualify.
- There is one king of each league / competition. Never two.
- Watch the full reference video before picking so you understand its theme and why the creator chose each clip.
- If you understand 90%, ask so you understand 110%. Paste the title + notes into Claude and ask it to explain what's being asked, or ask on WhatsApp. Guessing is not an option.

7. The Notes field

- The notes are instructions, not suggestions. Read them before anything else. Ballon d'Or video = 2008–2023 only. “May be parts” = make the parts. “Add Drogba at 5” = Drogba at 5.
- NEW “Add Carlos or Bale” style notes: if unsure whether it means one or both, ask — don't guess.
- If you want to go off-note, message Joel on WhatsApp first and wait for a reply.
- Never add things that weren't asked for (“ADDITIONS”, extra players, extra sections, suggestions inside descriptions). It creates confusion and slows everything down.
- If you change something across multiple videos that wasn't the norm, say so up front.
- NEW Notes are universal. Joel won't make the same note 20 times: once you see a note on one video, add it to your notes doc and fix it on every video.
- When a correction has been given once, check your other pending videos for the same mistake before Joel finds it. Repeating a corrected mistake across weeks is what turns a note into a redo.

8. AI use

- NEW “I hired you, not Claude. If Claude could do it all I wouldn't hire you.” Claude is a tool; you verify it works and every decision is yours.
- You decide. AI assists. For Type A videos AI never picks or orders clips. For Type B it can build the list — you verify every line.
- Verify AI output against reality: a combined XI runs GK – LB – CB – CB – RB – CDM – CM – CM – LW – RW – ST. Neuer is still playing. Yamal was not at the 2018 World Cup. A club cannot play a nation.
- For XI videos add who missed out for each position (e.g. “De Bruyne over X”).
- NEW AI descriptions are fine for off-pitch, factual content (career stories, retirements): paste the shortlist into Claude with “give a brief description of [player] + title”. AI descriptions are a no-go for on-pitch clips — anything describing what happens in a clip is written by you, second-by-second.
- NEW AI for grammar is fine only if the result still reads the way you wrote it. If it turns your line into flowery AI prose (“immense physical force... flattened like a pancake”), that's a rewrite, not a grammar fix.
- NEW Claude can't open links — describe or paste what it needs.

- Never paste an AI explanation. Explanations are your reasoning for accepting each pick, in your words.
- State your AI use on every video where you used it and what for (list, dates, terminology, grammar). Be 100% transparent.
- AI for facts you then don't check is how fake matches end up in scripts.

9. Descriptions

Format: Player vs Team. That is how Joel reads it out.

- Name the subject of the video in every clip. A Mbappé clip that never says “Mbappé” is a failed clip.
- Name every player involved where possible (Haaland AND Szoboszlai). Use the jersey-reading tool, search the moment on YouTube, or ask Aldrich. “Player in a blue kit”, “unnamed opponent”, “vs opponent”, “career stats unavailable” — all banned. Find it.
- Unknown player → describe by position or one feature (“the goalkeeper”, “female player”). Unknown team → leave it out. No kit-colour fashion descriptions.
- A club never plays a nation. If your description says Tottenham vs Colombia, something is wrong.
- Describe the clip, not the reference video. Describe what happened, not what the creator joked about.
- The description must serve the title. “Messi carried Argentina” means describe how he carried, not a full move breakdown. “Celebrations” means describe the celebration, not the goal. Don't spend lines on a player who isn't the subject.
- Second-by-second, as if for a blind person: where did the shot go, did the keeper save it, did it go wide. Then stop — no tangents.
- NEW Narrate it like a commentator would narrate each second of play. Say where on the pitch the player is and which part of the goal it went in (top left, bottom right). “Kicks the ball and scores” is poor.
- NEW Describe exactly what you see — wrong body parts or actions (Savinho “stomach” when it was a shot) go straight into the voiceover.
- NEW Write in the tone Joel reads out on the channel. Stiff, over-built sentences leave him no room for creative freedom and sound unnatural read aloud.
- Don't miss the beat that makes the clip: Zirkzee waited for it to roll in; the woman didn't know she'd scored; Ronaldinho went back and forth then back-heeled the nutmeg. These make or break the script.
- Do not describe or mock famous viral dances. Name it, move on.
- Add year / season when clips are similar (all Messi vs Real Madrid, Barça vs Real Madrid goals) so there's a differentiator.
- Add requested stats inside the entry (13/100 free kicks, sprint speed, record figures, finals lost, curses). Specify left or right when it matters.
- Simple mass-audience English. “Enforcers” → “defenders”. “Plant foot gives way” → “misses the throw”. You gain nothing from fancy words; we are trying to get millions of views.
- Only say “signature” / “iconic” / “famous” when certain. Every fact correct — never invent a player, match, or score (the fake Demba Ba entry; Bale's bicycle kick was vs Barça, not Liverpool). Comedic factual bending is Joel's call, not yours.
- Sarcasm and Joel's voice (aura, rage-bait lines, running gags like Ronaldo's “100,000 career goals”, “Ronaldo could never”) when it comes naturally, and always when the notes ask for it (e.g. “call the dive genius”).

10. Football terminology you must know

These mistakes have each caused a wrong description. The full terms list is in Appendix B — use the main terms until they feel natural. NEW Before using any term you're not sure about, search it and understand it; they don't all mean the same thing.

- Nutmeg — rolling the ball between an opponent's legs and getting past. Not “accidentally kicked it through his own legs”, not “possession turned over”.
- Taking a touch — controlling the ball. A first-time shot has no touch.
- Corner kick — the set piece from the corner arc. A goal scored from near the corner flag in open play is not a corner.
- Outside the box ≠ outside the pitch. The box is the penalty area.
- Intercept = stop the ball. Not dribble past.

- Dummy / let it run — letting a pass go past you on purpose.
- Throw-in vs throwing the ball at a player.
- “Kick” is banned unless literally kicking a person. Say shot, pass, chip, cross, volley. Avoid “of PSG”-style phrasing — just say the team.
- “Attempts” ≠ did it. “Powerful dribble” means nothing. Spell football terms correctly (cleats, back heel) — the AI reads misspellings wrongly.

11. Explanations (every video, every clip)

- One line per number, a full phrase, never one word. “Viral”, “least”, “mostly mentioned”, “good hook” are not explanations. Put each number on its own line so it's easy to read.
- Data-backed: “5 — start clip of [reference link], 1.2M views.” / “4 — top comment ‘Neymar was so cool’, 8,372 likes.” / “3 — more reacted than 2 in comments (pasted below).”
- NEW Say what actually proves it. If #5 is there because of comments, say comments — “good hook” tells Joel nothing (the Lukaku case).
- NEW Explain why the clip IS in the video, not only why you didn't use something else. Both together is best for context.
- For Type B: state the ordering rule used (“chronological, newest first”).
- Explain why THIS clip over the others, not why the whole video went viral.
- Your reasoning, not the AI's. If you used AI, say so in the explanation.
- Paste the comments you relied on — it helps.
- No essays, no feelings, no struggles — that goes on WhatsApp.
- Never skip. Writing the explanation is how you catch your own duplicate clips and wrong picks.

12. Process

- Colour code: Green = approved. Orange = fix. Red = remove/redo that clip. Red title = redo the whole video. Two+ reds in one video = full redo.
- NEW Status lives on the video number: its colour plus the approve time Joel adds. Approved means nothing left to do on that video.
- “Redo from scratch”: copy old work elsewhere, delete, restart the full flow — 15-20 clips → shortlist → order → describe → explain. You may paste previously-approved descriptions back in; nothing else from the old version.
- Template exactly. Separate parts as 19.1, 19.2 etc. so each can be approved, audio-linked, and edited independently. Fill every field. Never leave a section blank — “nothing here so I can't review” is a lost day.
- NEW Never mark comments as resolved. Reply under each one — “noted”, “done”, or your answer. Even a thumbs up. No reply means Joel can't close it and can't tell you've read it.
- NEW If you don't understand a comment, reply “I don't understand” — not “I think I changed this”. Joel never highlights something for no reason.
- Say “done” only when it is done, in the place Joel asked. Re-read the comment before replying — “done” on a video still in the wrong order gets re-opened.
- NEW When Joel asks “what do you mean?”, explain it a different, clearer way. Don't repeat the same sentence.
- NEW Scripts that already have voiceover: acknowledge the notes, don't edit them. Recheck every script that hasn't been read out yet.
- NEW Recheck means every word, and every word is intentional — not a quick gloss. Take two days if needed. For videos Joel hasn't reviewed, don't assume they're wrong; verify they're right.
- Check your own work before submitting: duplicates, spelling, title match, notes followed, order direction (we start at 5).
- Notes doc is mandatory. Every rule, every mistake, and every voice-note instruction gets written down as you listen — not remembered. Joel will not repeat himself.
- Ask questions when unsure. Re-ask rather than guess.
- NEW Repeated errors that waste review time may lead to penalties.

13. Pre-Submission Checklist

Any “No” = do not submit. Fix it first. Joel does not review videos that haven't passed this. Copy it under each video in the doc, or fill it in a separate tab and link it.

Video no.: _____ Title: _____ Type: A / B / Names Date: _____

Check	Yes	No
BEFORE SEARCHING
NEW I read all new comments on every week, replied to each, and did revisions before starting this video.
I have decided if this is Type A (clip → viral formula), Type B (facts/numbers → chronological/numeric) or a Name/story list.
I have defined the key word in the title (tournament, leagues, legends, primes, etc.) and it matches what I made.
I have read the Notes field and followed every instruction in it (including “use Claude”).
I searched the exact title on YouTube first and watched the full reference video.
SOURCING
Every reference is viral (100k+ views, ideally 500k+), about the title, and linked in the reference section. I judged videos on views, not likes.
I sourced from Shorts where possible; any long-form clip has link + timestamp next to it.
Every clip is a banger. I did not fill a slot with a weak clip — if I couldn't find one, I asked Joel.
The most recent edition / current season is included where the title needs it.
The editor can realistically find and clean every clip (no heavy watermarks, grain, pop-ups, or too-old footage).
ORDER
Type A: #5 is a proven hook from the start of the most viral reference, not a comment pick. If not, the reason is in the explanation.
Type A: proven hooks were weighed before comments; comment-based picks sit at #4/#3; #1 is a notable #1, not just “the best”.
Type A: bait picks are spaced out; Messi and Ronaldo are not together at the start.
Type B: order is chronological or numeric, starting at 5, in the direction the notes say, and follows real editions.
I did not copy the reference's exact order without a reason, and I didn't reorder because commenters asked.
DESCRIPTIONS
Every entry is Player vs Team. The video's subject player is named in every clip.
No “unnamed”, “unknown”, “vs opponent”, kit colours, or “stats unavailable”.
No club vs nation, no wrong match, no player who wasn't there that year. Every fact checked.
Each description serves the title, includes the key beat, and says where on the pitch / which part of the goal.
Terminology is correct: nutmeg, touch, corner, box, intercept, dummy. “Kick” not used. Any term I was unsure of, I looked up.
Simple English in Joel's reading tone, no tangents, no suggestions or notes to Joel inside the description.
Requested stats, years/seasons, left/right are included where asked or needed.
EXPLANATIONS
One full-phrase line per number, with data (reference views, comment text + likes, or ordering rule).
The explanations are my reasoning, not pasted from AI, and say why each clip is IN the video.

Check	Yes	No
I stated where and how I used AI on this video.
BEFORE SUBMITTING
No duplicate clips, no blank sections, spelling checked, every word intentional.
Template followed; parts separated as X.1, X.2 if needed.
NEW Highlight/reference links are correct (source links added after approval per the SOP).
I checked my other pending videos for any mistake Joel corrected this week.
I have added anything new I learned to my notes doc.

Joel's 8 questions before you send any pack

1. Are the selected clips actually relevant to the topic? 2. Are they strong enough for the video? 3. Do the descriptions clearly explain what happens? 4. Do they match the clip accurately? 5. Is the ranking/order optimised? 6. Are the highlight/reference links correct? 7. Have you followed all notes on the doc? 8. Have you applied feedback from previous scripts?

Signed off by scriptwriter: _____ AI used for: _____

14. Recurring failures, ranked by cost

- Wrong video type: viral formula on a facts video, or chronology on a clip video.
- Title misread (goalkeepers vs World Cup, teams vs players, primes vs moments, worst winners, free kicks vs penalties).
- Notes ignored — including “use Claude” treated as optional.
- NEW Own criteria invented: “#1 = the best”, “most mentioned = hook”.
- Comments weighed over proven hooks.
- AI picked / explained and it wasn't verified.
- Wrong facts: wrong match, wrong team, club vs nation, player not present that year.
- Subject player not named; “unnamed / unknown” filler.
- Terminology errors (nutmeg, touch, corner, box).
- Missing the key beat of the clip.
- Explanations skipped or one-word.
- Non-viral or off-topic sourcing.
- NEW Doc comments not replied to / marked resolved.
- Same corrected mistake repeated in pending videos.

15. The big picture

The system is repeatable: read notes → pick the type → viral reference (A) or verified list (B) → best 5 → formula or chronological order → second-by-second player-vs-team descriptions → line-by-line data-backed explanations → checklist → submit → highlight links once approved. Once it's habit it runs on autopilot and review takes minutes. Master the baseline, then rage-bait upgrades and the view-bonus pay structure kick in.

Appendix A — Role terms (from 3 Aug message)

- Pay: $4 per approved script pack. Workload: 3–5 approved packs per day depending on posting volume (minimum 5 new scripts/day currently expected).
- A full approved pack: 7–10 clips researched, final 5 selected, correct order 5 → 1, clear description of each clip, source link for each clip, title/topic included, ready for scripting/editing.
- Approved only if clips are strong, the final 5 make sense, the order fits the format, descriptions are clear, and source links are included. Weak clips, vague descriptions, or missing links = revise before it counts.
- Examples: 4/day × 30 = 120 packs = $480; 5/day × 30 = 150 packs = $600 before bonuses. Realistic with normal bonuses ~$700/month; up to ~$900–1,000 with high workload and strong performance.

YouTube Shorts views (7 days after posting)	Bonus
100k	$1
250k	$3
500k	$5
1M	$10
2M+	$20

- Bonuses: YouTube Shorts views only; highest tier only, no stacking; only when your approved pack was used. A different idea, different clips, or a completely different order may void the bonus.
- Pay period: work approved between payment dates is paid on the next one. Payment date: the first Sunday after the 15th of each month; bonuses paid on the next date after they're confirmed.
- Reviewed on quality, speed, consistency, usability of packs, and account performance.
